The Big Day

Your Test Day Playbook.

Calm is a skill. This is how to bring it with you.

◯ The Night Before

- Pack everything tonight. Pencils, eraser, water, ID, approved calculator if needed.
- Do light review only — a single short passage. No new material. No all-nighter.
- Eat something familiar. Tonight is not the night to experiment with anything new.
- Phone out of the room an hour before bed. Protect your sleep like it is part of the grade.

◯ The Morning Of

- Eat protein and complex carbs. Skip the sugar spike — the crash comes during the test.
- Move your body for five minutes. Walk, stretch, shake out your hands. Lower the nerves.
- Arrive early enough to settle, not so early that waiting builds up pressure.
- At the door, four slow breaths: in for four, hold for four, out for six. It works.

During the Test

- Preview the questions, then read the passage hunting specific answers.
- Answer every question. A guess has better odds than a blank — always.
- Skip hard ones and return. Easy points protect your time budget. Come back with fresh eyes.
- Trust your first read. Change an answer only when you find concrete evidence, not a hunch.
- Pace by section, not by question. Check the clock every few minutes, not every question.
- If anxiety spikes, breathe and reset. Ten slow seconds saves ten lost minutes.
- Save 2–3 minutes at the end. Review flagged items, confirm your bubbled answers.

One last thing.

High school starts soon, but you do not have to wait for it to begin showing up as the reader and writer you want to be. Test day is just a window. Open it, show your thinking clearly, and step through. The next version of you is already on the other side.

(C) Both describe a greenhouse being closed for spring break.
(D) Both show that caring for something living requires attention to signs that go beyond a checklist.

Use the story and poem to answer this question.

15) Which TWO lines from the poem best support the idea that care involves noticing change?Select TWO correct answers.

(A) At first I thought the task was only water,
(B) Then the leaves began speaking in angles,
(C) Now I know care is not only doing what was written.
(D) in the slow grammar of turning toward what they lacked.
(E) a list to finish before the light changed.

Use the story and poem to answer this question.

16) How does the mood of the poem shift from beginning to end?

(A) From routine detachment to alert understanding
(B) From humor to embarrassment
(C) From fear to relief
(D) From confusion to annoyance

Use the story and poem to answer this question.

17) What shared message do the story and poem convey?

(A) Plants grow best when instructions are ignored completely.
(B) Responsibility is mostly about finishing work quickly.
(C) Care becomes meaningful when people respond to what they notice, not only to what they were told.
(D) Living things should be left alone whenever possible.

Use the story and poem to answer this question.

18) Which sentence best summarizes the story?

(A) Laila loses the greenhouse key and has to replace it before school reopens.
(B) While caring for a greenhouse during spring break, Laila learns that responsibility involves observing and responding thoughtfully, not just following directions.
(C) A gardening club elects Laila as its new president.
(D) The biology teacher rewrites the watering checklist during break.
